The Law Of Progress Is Reflected In Age-Old Science Of Surveying And Mapping

The science of surveying is one of the oldest in the world, and it has come back through the mists of antiquity to the early days about the banks of the Nile and, for all we know, even farther. But, although truly venerable it is not yet too old to adapt itself to modern ideas nor to appropriate whatever it may find of service in the onward march of civilization.

The "groma," one of the most ancient of surveying instruments used for angle measuring in the early Egyptian days, was constructed from the centre axis of dials having bands together by hinges of flat-plate brass. From this crude device it is a far step to some of the highly specialized and efficient instruments in use today in the evolution of which countless inventions and adaptations have been called upon. Inventions and adaptations, however, in their principles and application present a diversity about as wide as it is possible to conceive.

The transit-theodolite, for instance, the modern angle-measuring instrument and the logical successor to the groma, has been gradually evolved taking one idea from here and another from there until it has reached its present state. This state is by no means perfect as yet it is evident that a further tendency to effect it in further changes looking toward a becoming of weight, at the same time with an increase in compasses, angles and accuracy.

The transit-theodolite, however, although a very long and complicated instrument to the surveyor, is not by any means so to the scientist. Many studies of surveying may be carried on where this device is either not used at all or used, places only a minor part. Indeed, sometimes instruments are used in surveying that may be considered by some as survey instruments.

One of those that might be mentioned is the barometer. This instrument measures the pressure of the atmosphere and is ordinarily thought of in connection with weather forecasts. The differences of atmospheric pressure also occur with difference of elevation. This principle is utilized to determine elevations of points above sea level, a matter of such vital importance in topographic mapping.

As another instance, shortly after Confederation, when the Dominion of Western Canada began to be opened up, our country was confronted with the necessity of proving title of the rugged areas of the Rocky mountains. Here the most accurate mapping was impractical and expensive, and new methods had to be devised. In casing about for these the camera was used upon which by the application of optical means the most accurate mapping was made.

Dr. E. G. Dwyer, surveyor-general of Canada, methods which in their development were highly technical but in their use were so simple, this work went satisfactorily ahead. These might not seem unusual considerations, especially in the connection between the art of taking pictures and that of mapping the country, but the method evolved, namely that of aerial photography, has since been used in all parts of the world. In this method photographs are taken of the surrounding country from high points offering commanding views and by an inversion of the principles of perspective, these photographs are translated into topographic maps.

The recent application of the aeroplane to the science of surveying is fairly generally known. When man began to fly with a reasonable degree of success, it was not long before the possibilities began to be considered of substituting the moving aeroplane for the stationary mountain peak as a support for the camera. This was so obvious that the method could be applied to other than mountainous country, a most valuable device when the extent of territory still unoccupied in our country is considered.

Mathematicians attacked the problem and the aerial photographing method of mapping was thus evolved, a method that has proven itself particularly adaptable in desert mapping work. In this method alone the Topographical Survey Department of the Interior, working in conjunction with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and provincial surveyors, particularly in Ontario and Quebec, have carried down many miles of territory, an area which by other methods would represent many years' work and tremendous expense.

Game Conservation Needed

Urged Protection of the Fish and Game Life of Saskatchewan

Need of taking advantage of the experience of other parts of America by conserving the fish and game life of the province while there is time, was urged upon the members of the Saskatchewan Fish and Game Protection Association, Saskatoon Branch, by Fred Bradshaw, Regina, provincial game commissioner, and by George C. Macdonald, Prince Albert, Dominion fisheries inspector for Saskatchewan, at the annual game banquet of the association, it was pointed out that every sixth person in Saskatchewan had a car, every sixth a gun. Taking money was also made of the program of provincial legislation, keeping shooting accidents and fatalities a matter for consideration under the criminal code.

The British Columbia estates referred to lie mostly in the Columbia and Okanagan valleys and close to Vancouver.

Population of Prairie Provinces

An Increase Shown of 111,600 Over That of 1921

According to a recent statement issued by the Canadian Government Bureau of Statistics the population of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was 2,067,952 at June 1, 1925, when the last census was taken. This is an increase of 111,600 over the population of 1921 at the decennial census. The largest increase of the three provinces since 1921 is credited to Saskatchewan, which now has a population of 821,652, a 15 per cent increase of 95,532 in five years. Manitoba has now an increase of 25,948, the largest gain being the province's total population of 625,554. Alberta in 1925 had a population of 697,541, an increase of 19,150 in five years. About thirty-four per cent of the people of the three prairie provinces live outside the cities and towns. Of the total population of 2,067,952 in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, there live in the rural districts number 1, 212,951 and 723,741 live in the urban districts.

The population of the City of Winnipeg jumped from 179,087 in 1921 to 247,952 in 1925. In Manitoba, 191,995 last year. It is the largest the most rapid population of the Canadian prairie cities with 62,151. Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan, is a close third with 45,162, only 250 behind Calgary, Edmonton, however, was the most notable gain since 1921 with 6,242 compared with Calgary's increase of 2,208 in the five years under review.

Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan, increased from 25,729 in 1921 to 37,229 last year. Saskatoon, the seat of the University of Saskatchewan, and the Regina, surrounded by a productive farming country, has a population of 31,251, an increase since 1921 of 3,162.

While a census of the whole of Canada is taken only every ten years, one of the prairie provinces is taken every five years.

"Almost Anyone Can Win"

No Better Opportunity Anywhere Than in Western Canada

In a recent letter to the Canadian Government office at Detroit, C. L. Fahlman, of Ionia, Michigan, gives an outline of his impressions and observations following a visit to Western Canada last fall. The letter reads in part:

"I am pleased to tell you about our trip to Western Canada last fall. We visited to Regina and spent two months in that district. I like it there for I don't think there is any better wheat-growing land in America. I am going West next summer for I can raise a good farm in Regina district and will take possession in a year or so after Nov. 1, 1927.

"Saskatchewan is a great country and opportunities are plentiful and I think by some hard work almost any one can win. Just think, it takes only thirty days for wheat to be ready to harvest and what a wonderful crop there was in some districts, especially in the heavy land—fifty bushels per acre."

"The farm I am sure I can lease is 640 acres, all under cultivation. I will be able to concentrate almost all my raising area in Canada, and consequently 1,500,000 pounds of the wool handled co-operatively came from these two sections alone. Every province, except three—New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island—has experienced an increase in 1925 over the previous year.

Egg Production In Canada

Saskatchewan Follows Lead of Ontario in Largest Production

The production of farm eggs in Canada in 1925 is estimated at 2,277,829,229 dozen of the value of 60,198,285, as compared with 2,247,875,285 dozen of the value of 57,679,210 in 1924, an increase of 2,953,944 dozen and 3,519,075. The estimated production by provinces is as follows in order—Ontario, 968,229 dozen, 27,188,258; Saskatchewan, 25,221,423 dozen, 3,372,841; Quebec, 24,881,125 dozen, 3,169,962; Alberta, 25,310,111 dozen, 3,481,412; British Columbia, 17,142,779 dozen, 2,179,576; Manitoba, 16,648,527 dozen, 2,395,259; New Brunswick, 2,362,175 dozen, 311,000; Nova Scotia, 2,531,627 dozen, 316,561; Prince Edward Island, 2,706,145 dozen, 312,522; and Atlantic provinces, 25,415 dozen, 318,506. The outstanding feature is the standing in this regard of the four western provinces, these occupying second, fourth, fifth, and sixth places.

Increase in Wool Clip

Even And A Half Million Pounds Marketed in 1925

Final estimates for the wool clip of the year 1925 place the total at close to eleven and a half million pounds. Of this amount about five million pounds were used locally, the rest of the clip in Canadian and certain new settlements in the West, consequently not reaching commercial channels. Of the remainder, about 50 per cent, or 3,500,000 pounds was marketed on a graded basis through the medium of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers. This is a substantial increase over 1925, when 3,275,000 pounds were shipped to the Co-operative.

Southern Alberta and Southern Saskatchewan, where sheep are raised over the prairies in large flocks, are the most concentrated sheep raising areas in Canada, and consequently 1,500,000 pounds of the wool handled co-operatively came from these two sections alone. Every province, except three—New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island—has experienced an increase in 1925 over the previous year.

50. A Pays B a $100 Check; B Keeps It a Week and the Bank Fails; Who Loses The Cheque?

B should present the cheque for payment within a reasonable time; if he keeps it longer he does so at his own risk, and should the bank fail in the meantime, he could not demand payment from A. What constitutes a reasonable time has been fixed by law. If the bank is in the same town where both A and B live and both are customers of the same bank, it should be deposited the same day. If on another bank in the same town, B should deposit it in his own bank, and it would pass the clearing house the following day. If drawn on a bank outside the city, B should forward it for collection not later than the day after it is received.

51. How to Hypnotize the Common Barnyard Chicken?

The way is as follows: 1, catch the chicken, any ordinary old hen will do; 2, hold the chicken's bill close to some flat surface—a walk or board floor; 3, with a piece of chalk tap on the floor directly in front of the chicken's bill; 4, draw a heavy, straight chalk line, not less than two feet, immediately in front of the chicken's bill and leading directly from it in the direction the chicken is looking; 5, now let loose the chicken gently and remain perfectly quiet, and if there is no movement nearby the chicken will remain for a considerable time staring at the line.

52. What Is Direct Current?

Direct current (abbreviated D.C.) is an electric current that flows through a wire constantly in one direction. A storage battery delivers a current of this kind.

53. What Is Alternating Current?

Alternating current (abbreviated A.C.) does not flow steadily in one direction. At a given instant it is flowing through the circuit in one direction; the next instant in the opposite direction. Each change of direction is known as a "cycle." Ordinary current for light and power is known as "60-cycle current," which means that it has gone through 60 reversals of flow (cycles) in one second. Radio waves are alternating.

54. What Is the Detector as Used in Radio?

The aural, or some other device, receives the incoming radio waves and passes them on to the "detector" (either a crystal or a vacuum tube). The vibration of these alternating radio waves are several hundred thousand, even millions, per second, and will not produce any sound in the usual telephone receiver, because they are too rapid.

A peculiarity common to both crystal and vacuum tube is that

C. G. I. T. GIRLS CORNER

The Upward Road

I will follow the upward road today.
I will keep my face to the light,
I will think high thoughts as I go my way.

I will do what I know is right,
I will look for the flowers by the side of the road.

I will laugh and love and be strong,
I will try to lighten another's load
This day as I fare along

At the last meeting of our group Mrs. Palmer gave us a very interesting and helpful talk on giving up individual interests for the sake of advancing club welfare.

As it was missionary night our leader took up "The Romance of Prince Rama," which is to be our study book for the next few months.

Next Tuesday night's meeting will be a supper meeting, after which the girls are to have the use of the gymnasium. We are hoping that every girl may be able to attend.

The Arrowood C. G. I. T. group were successful in winning the banner for towns and rural districts in the Self-Service campaign. With a membership of only ten girls, they raised $163.50, making an average of $16.35 per member.

S. Wesley Church, Edmonton, won the banner for cities. They have done this three years in succession. Their average was over $800 per girl this year.
